November's Focus

Self- Awareness and Diversity

Being self-aware is having a good knowledge and understanding of yourself including being aware of your own feelings and character.

Practicing self-awareness is about learning to better understand why you feel what you feel and why you behave in a particular way.

Native American Heritage

November is Native American Heritage Month. First celebrated as American Indian Day in 1916, the celebration was extended to a week in the 1980s. In 1990, President George H.W. Bush issued an official proclamation calling for a month-long celebration. We celebrate and acknowledge the important contributions of Native people.
